

LSN is a not-for-profit organisation focused on making learning work across the public and private sectors, in the UK and internationally.

We're experts in learning and development – at individual and organisational levels. We apply this expertise to provide consulting, outsourcing, research, technology and training services, all underpinned by a powerful body of research and 25 years' experience.

Our people work at the very forefront of their field, and we take pride in placing innovative policy and practice at the heart of everything we do.

Since merging with the National Extension College in 2010, LSN has committed to continuing and strengthening the Michael Young legacy, which we see as an integral part of the charitable objects of the merged organisation. This legacy includes widening access and reducing barriers to participation in education and learning, influencing policy makers and funders to bring about change to help meet education and learning needs more effectively, and researching and piloting new and innovative approaches to education and learning.
